

The sun is setting soon.
There are two giraffes walking side by side in the sunset.
One is taller and dignified, while the other's smaller and has a soft manner.
I wonder if they are brothers or husband and wife.

They seem to be heading for a big tree standing alone ahead of them.
The giraffes and other animals are often rallying around the tree as if it might be a magnet.

It feeds them, provides the shades in the strong sunlight and even turns to be their hives to protect them from the carnivorous animals.

Such scenes have probably been naturally repeated everyday on the mother earth of Africa for over thousands of years.
The tree might have been watching them for long time.

We will be the tree and be ready for our customers.
We certainly hope to be like the tree, standing calmly with its roots firmly planted in the ground. We would like to support our customers and communities and continue playing a significant role in their lives.
